Other comments

This master thesis deals with the topic of Lean Management, and it is supposed to present the application of Lean Management in Public Sector Organizations. The aim is mentioned in the assignment as - "the aim of the thesis is to define benefits of using Lean management tools and its critical success factors in public sector". The actual work is then oriented towards application in the healthcare sector. The work does not conclusively explain why this particular sector was chosen. The work is based on extensive research, while the study itself works with resources published in the Google Scholar database. The work as a whole is rather informative and overview in nature, the author basically does not present his own conclusions and outputs, as is expected for Master thesis. On the formal side, the text contains many errors.

Questions and suggestions for the defence

The objectives of the work include - "define critical success factors in public sector" (in relation to the topic). Identify and discuss these critical factors.
